

Gerard Alexander

Gerard Alexander is Associate Professor of Politics at the University of Virginia. His research interests include democratic transitions and consolidation, empirical democratic theory, conservative politics, and the politics of advanced industrial societies, particularly in Western Europe.

Prof. Alexander is the author of The Sources of Democratic Consolidation (Cornell University Press, 2002), and of articles in the Journal of Theoretical Politics Studies, Comparative Political Studies, and the Revista Espanola de Ciencia Politica. He has received grants from the Council for European studies and the Fulbright program. His current research focuses on the political right's trajectory in democratic politics in Western Europe and the U.S.

Other Publications

" Claremont Review of Books, Spring 2005

"Anti-anti-Neoconservatism," Claremont Review of Books, Winter, 2004

"The Authoritarian Illusion," The National Interest, Fall, 2004

"The End of a Left-Wing Fantasy," Weekly Standard, November 22, 2004

"Democratic Exaggerations," Claremont Review of Books, Summer 2004

"Europe's Non-Strategy," Weekly Standard, May 10, 2004

"The Myth of the Racist Republicans," Claremont Review of Books, Spring 2004

"A Lifesaving War," Weekly Standard, March 29, 2004

"Utopia's Victims," Claremont Review of Books, Winter 2003

"An Unbalanced Critique of Bush," Weekly Standard, November 3, 2003

"The Realities of Confronting Genocide: A Review of Samantha Power's 'A Problem from Hell,'" The Hedgehog Review, Spring 2003

"Interests Have Consequences, Too," Claremont Review of Books, Winter 2002

Journal articles

"Institutionalized Uncertainty, the Rule of Law, and the Sources of Democratic Consolidation," Comparative Political Studies, December 2002

"Riesgo Político y Consolidación Democrática: Una Reinterpretación del Caso Español (1975-1985)," Revista Española de Ciencia Política, October 2001

"Institutions, Path Dependence, and Democratic Consolidation," Journal of Theoretical Politics, July 2001

Book chapters

"Women and Men at the Ballot Box: Voting in Spain's Two Democracies," in Constructing Spanish Womanhood, ed. by Victoria Enders and Pamela Radcliff (SUNY Press, 1999)

"Managing the State and the State as Manager," in New Labour in Power, ed. by Brian Brivati and Tim Bale (Routledge, 1997)